

ABSTRACT

A method for preserving food includes putting food in a container having an inner surface coated with a metal-modified apatite or in a container made of a material to which the metal-modified apatite is added, the metal-modified apatite having an apatite crystal structure including metal atoms partially comprising photocatalytic metal, and placing the container in a dark place at least temporarily.